

Manifold

A manifold is an essential piece of equipment utilised throughout the process industry. It is used to either converge multiple branches into a single channel or diverge a single channel into multiple branches. There are a variety of manifolds available but choosing the correct one depends on pressure, flow, temperature, material selection, and port & valve selection.

